1. Had MCN out for atom through midget for skills sessions.
2. the DV Thunder ensured we had 2-3 players for each evaluation skills sessions, working as demonstrators, pylon movers and general help. Thanks to all of the coaches who came out and helped on the ice, and to all of the directors who had the info flowing to the parents.
3. In accordance with our evaluation policy, coaches picked the initial 10-14 kids and then we had an outside, unbiased committee create a list of 6 athletes for the coach to pick their final 3 from. For the bantam and midgets, we had 3 from MCN and then the goalies were evaluated by ATC goaltending from Edmonton. Lanny Patten was able to join us on several occasions as well.
4. have put on 2 coaching clinics so far (Coach 1&2) and then the hitting clinic for the 2005's moving to bantam.

We are trying different things to see how they work. We are setting the hardboards up on each ringette line and playing that way, each having our own bench. Sometimes we have done two 30 min halves, sometimes three 20 min periods. We are currently doing 2 minute shifts, might reduce to 1.5 min. After a goal the coach blows a whistle and the scoring team moves back to the red line and the team that was scored on starts with the puck behind their net and passes it up. The other team pressures as soon as they touch the puck. After the goalie covers the puck a coach blows the whistle and the other team backs up to the blue line to allow the goalie to safely move the puck to their teammates. There is quite a broad range of skill levels on each team so we are trying line matching during games, which seems to be working well. As well we are doing some combined practices together with both teams, so we can have a greater number of kids with the same skill set in a group so it is easier to run drills and challenge them at their own paces. Overall it's going well. May be some things to structure differently next year when it's mandated but so far it seems to be going well and all the coaches have been awesome

Atom: Jordan Cameron

1. With almost 70 kids in atom an 50+ trying for the top team, it was quite the task to get it all separated out. A evaluations went good, with Jordan, Bob, MCN and Mandy/Tyler all having say in who made the team. B evaluations also went good, we had input from Eric, Mike, Bob, Jordan and MCN to help make the selections.

2. In both levels of Atom we have MCN's rankings available if there is some disgruntled parents looking for answers.

3. It's still looking like Tier 1 for the A team and Tier 3 for the B's. The C's are still in the middle of tiering schedule so time will tell.
