Please explain why you feel this team should be awarded the Team of the Week: Blue Ice is a group of U12 community girls that has come together as a powerhouse team. These girls try their hearts out and are so eager to learn that it's amazing the amount of progress each one of them has made since the beginning of the season. These girls laugh and have fun together on and off the field and are so supportive of each other. Their positiveness and heart is apparent in the amazing season they are having (only one loss so far) and recently taking the gold medal at the Polar Cup by winning all 4 of their games--accumulating 22 goals for and only 5 against! Please explain why you feel this team should be awarded the Team of the Week:

This team is undefeated so far this season. They are a great group of boys that are playing so well together with great passing and generating great scoring opportunities. The boys are communicating well on the field and are playing for the love of the game, not just to win. The coach has a supportive and keen approach and the kids all really enjoying playing on his team!

Nominated By: Lisa Crowle

Please explain why you feel this team should be awarded the Team of the Week: As with most community teams, there was not many players that had played with each other when this season started. The boys play very well positional, they support plays, they get to open spaces, they pass and call for the ball, everyone supports each other. Everyone shows up for practices and everyone shows up for the games - they are never short players and they all show up ready to play. Everyone is respectful to the coaches, other players and the officials. So far they are undefeated, however there has been some really close games where the team had to make adjustments (defense not pinching in, holding the line more, quicker passes) and requires little motivation to improve their play. They always bring their best and try their best.
