Subject: Fall Ball Insurance

This bulletin addresses the questions we have received about insurance coverage for Fall Ball and Fall Rep Programs.

Relevant to this bulletin is the definition of the Softball BC membership season. A Softball BC annual membership starts May 1st and ends April 31st.

2025 REP TRYOUTS

Rep Tryouts are typically held over one or two weekends.

We recommend that everyone who attends tryouts sign a waiver before stepping on the diamond.

The participant injury policy will not be in effect for these activities unless the participants are registered with Softball BC.

The club itself is covered under our CGL policy, which covers catastrophic injury claims by a participant. They would likely need to prove they had taken steps to advise the parents or the participant of what the risk might be, if they were proven to be negligent and knew they were being negligent, the insurance company could refuse to cover the claim and the club's directors would be on the hook for the entire amount – this is admittedly an extreme example, but insurance companies are getting tougher and more rigid in their interpretation of the policies they write.

An association/club that allows players to participate in tryouts without a waiver could be liable for any claims made by that person.

2025 REP BALL TEAM FORMATION AND TRAINING

Clubs should register their NEW players and coaches once teams are formed. New players are defined as participants who were not registered with Softball BC this past summer. Registering new players ensures they are covered by our participant injury policy until the new membership season starting May 1st.

An association/club that allows unregistered coaches/players to participate in fall rep training activities could be liable for any claims made by that person.

FALL BALL & OTHER PROGRAMS

Clubs should register Fall Ball participants who were not registered with Softball BC this past summer to ensure the new participants have insurance coverage and to protect your Association/Club. Registration ensures they have access to our participant injury policy until the new membership season starting May 1st.

An association/club that allows an unregistered coach/player to take part in fall ball could be liable for any claims made by that person.

UMPIRES AND FALL ACTIVITY

Umpires who were not registered with Softball BC this past summer, need to register before participating in fall activities to ensure they are covered by our insurance policies.
