

“Another analogy I like to use is a potluck dinner. Only I don’t just talk about it. I throw one. From time to time, I host a potluck dinner for our team.

Everyone brings a dish.

Every player is responsible for contributing just one thing. Maybe Chamique brings the beans. Kellie makes the corn. That’s all they have to worry about, no more and no less. They gather over at my house, and we sit around and eat and talk. The lesson is obvious. If they perform their assigned role, if they each fulfill their small share of responsibility and bring that specific dish—whether they like that dish or not—then we all get a big dinner.”